

French Canadian Societies That Flourish in the Capital

Organizations That Have Been Formed for Fraternal or Social Motives. Some Have Despised not the Day of Small Things and Have had an Up-hill Climb. Men at the Helm.

This week the eyes of the empire have been turned to old London, where President Loubet of France was the guest of King Edward and was received with glad acclaim.

The French societies of the Capital are gradually increasing in the number of members and influence and can now compare favorably with the bodies organized and fostered by their English speaking brethren.

L'INSTITUT CANADIEN FRANCAIS.

Fifty-one years ago on the 24th of June 1852 the Canadians in the city of Bytown were parading the streets with flying colors, fearlessly proclaiming their noble patriotic sentiments.

These words were received with applause. In the fall of the same year the Institut Canadien was founded, with Mr. J. B. Turgeon as its first president.

all hours of the day, and then there is the old mill down by the shore, where the ever-stirring lake lap against the ground beams of the building.

Then there is the lodge of The Breakers, a number of young Ottawa men, who have a finely constructed lodge where they sometimes get away to spend the afternoon and always the evening.

Every evening at Britannia it is a rush to get the boats out. There are all kinds of boats—sail boats, row boats, canoes, and although it has only been seen mooring once so far this season, Mr. William Rowat has a beautiful launch.

These are immediately alongside of the water edge and the effect could not be better.

There is only one cottage in Britannia that is not occupied this year, and even that is occupied with the furniture.
